Did You Know?

We appreciate your concern regarding California's Proposition 65 warnings, which are legally required to be on our Progessence Plus. Proposition 65 requires that products sold in California that carry any ingredients deemed to the California legislature to be hazardous to health must carry the warning you see on our label.

In the case of Progessence Plus, California requires the warning on all progesterone-containing products. However, California law does not distinguish between the synthetic medroxyprogesterone, which is the cause of California's concern, and the natural progesterone we derive from yams and is used widely in the health industry. Both are generically referred to as "progesterone," which is the ingredient name on California's list. If you would like further information on this topic, we recommend you contact your health professional.
